Customer Reviews

I've been using coupons for most of my adult life. Like many people, I started really using them a couple years ago. It became extreme and yes even addictive. I purchased items we hadn't used, some good, some flops. I purchased at great discounting, got free items and even "made" money by matching sales and coupons. I wasn't in the extreme area of purchasing so much I had "to invent" storage solutions. My husband's work is seasonal, so I did stock up for the winter lay off. I started off with a binder and clipped every coupon. I purchased up to 4 papers a week and a 6 month subscription to All You. I spent countless hours clipping, sorting, organizing coupons and surfing the web and paper ads. Sometimes I would go to 4 stores a week. I was able to use and donate most all items I purchased. I averaged a 50-80 percent savings each trip. And then decided I was not saving as much as I thought after I added up the fuel, paper and subscription cost along with my time it costs. I simplified. Now I purchase 2 papers, only if it's going to save me more than it costs. You can preview the Sunday papers coupons to see if you will use the coupons they offer that Sunday. I only cut out the coupons we regularly use. I put these in a legal size letter holder. It's vinyl and has 12 tabs. I 1st make a list of necessity and check sale ads and websites for sales and coupons. If it's a great sale and I have coupons I stock up. If not I wait. It took me a year to learn this balance. Now I save money and time! Great stockpiling as seen on tv's Extreme Couponing in my opinion is hoarding and reality tv. I don't think we need to do that. We should buy what we need to carry us through the next sale or if you know there will be a layoff, surgery, etc.
